

Global Nonviolent Action Database

Published on Global Nonviolent Action Database (<http://nvdatabase.swarthmore.edu>)

Madagascar citizens force free elections, 1990-1992

- African Democracy Campaigns (early 1990s)

Time period notes: It is unclear when the Forces Vives began planning for action, but the end date is set at the presidential elections in August about a year after Ratsiraka declared he would support the democratization process.

1990

to: August

1992

Country: Madagascar

Location City/State/Province: Antananarivo

Location Description: Protests took place all across the country, from the capital to other regions

Goals:

The ousting of president Didier Ratsiraka and the formation of democratic, multiparty elections

Methods

Methods in 1st segment:

- 048. Protest meetings › The Forces Vives start planning protests and demonstrations

Methods in 2nd segment:

Methods in 3rd segment:

- 038. Marches › Thousands of citizens march on the presidential palace
- 117. General strike › Pan-societal strike in Madagascar

Methods in 4th segment:

- 116. Generalised strike
- 117. General strike › In response to the August 10th killings

Methods in 5th segment:

Methods in 6th segment:

Additional methods (Timing Unknown):

- 104. Professional strike

Notes on Methods:

There is little specific information on every protest that took place during the years of '91 and '92, and not much information to classify it as violent or nonviolent. The actions I have noted are the only that I can confirm as fitting within a nonviolent campaign. The segment length may be slightly skewed because there is no clear start date.

Classifications

Classification:

Change

Cluster:

Democracy

Economic Justice

Group characterization:

- Citizens of Madagascar

Leaders, partners, allies, elites

Leaders:

Albert Zafy and the Forces Vives

Partners:

National Council of Christian Churches

External allies:

Not known

Involvement of social elites:

Not known

Joining/exiting order of social groups

Groups in 1st Segment:

Groups in 2nd Segment:

Groups in 3rd Segment:

Groups in 4th Segment:

Groups in 5th Segment:

- National Council of Christian Churches

Groups in 6th Segment:

Segment Length: Approximately 4 months

Opponent, Opponent Responses, and Violence

Opponents:

President Didier Ratsiraka and his state socialist regime

Nonviolent responses of opponent:

Not known

Campaigner violence:

Fringe violence and riots

Repressive Violence:

The presidential guard fired into a crowd of thousands marching on the presidential palace, killing and wounding dozens. Additional sources also report repressive violence at protests

Success Outcome

Success in achieving specific demands/goals:

6 points out of 6 points

Survival:

1 point out of 1 points

Growth:

2 points out of 3 points

Notes on outcomes:

Although Ratsiraka was ousted in '93, he returned to Madagascar in '97 and resumed his presidency. In that sense, the success was rather impermanent. In terms of survival and growth, it is hard to classify because action took place across the country on different levels and while it may have petered out in some districts it could have grown in others.

Madagascar gained its independence from French colonialism in 1960 after nearly 70 years under French rule. Vice Admiral Didier Ratsiraka was sworn into office on December 21, 1975, after a military coup ousted president Philibert Tsiranana, who had been in office since 1959. In his first term as president, Ratsiraka nationalized Madagascar's banks, insurance companies and mineral resources, following a socialist model that was wrought with censorship and government repression. By the late 1980's Ratsiraka's socialist regime had impoverished Madagascar. Even though the regime had made concessions to adopt the free market reforms outlined by the IMF, poverty and repression drew fast growing voices of opposition.

In 1989, Ratsiraka's 'reelection' drew widespread anger and riots from the population, as many suspected that the elections had been fraudulent. 75 people were killed in the riots. In 1990, an activist named Albert Zafy formed an opposition coalition called Forces Vives comprised of 16 political opposition parties and socio-professional organizations. Their goal was to organize a series of mass strikes and protests to force Ratsiraka out of office and usher in a new regime.

In May 1991, the Forces Vives orchestrated their first mass general strike against the government, temporarily crippling Ratsiraka's economy, and in July mass demonstrations shook the nation. The year 1991 was dotted with civil service strikes and protests organized by the Forces Vives that involved indignant citizens from all over the country. The unrest was widespread and apparent, taking hold among the working class citizens of Madagascar, the politicians, and soon the military.

The popular discontent with the regime took a new significance on August 10, 1991, when the Forces Vives organized a massive, peaceful march to the President's Palace. Between 100,000 and 400,000 people marched to represent a nation demanding that Ratsiraka step down from office to give way to a multiparty political system. When the activists reached the palace they were confronted by the presidential guard whose methods of dispersal proved fruitless until they opened fire with guns and grenades into the crowd. Between ten and twenty people were killed and many more were wounded. Shortly after the killings the Forces Vives orchestrated another massive strike against all banks, businesses, and public agencies; the Forces Vives maintained the widespread strike through August. In addition, local demonstrations and protests continued during the strike. In response to the August 10th killings, the anti-government protesters gained an ally in the National Council of Christian Churches, which threw its support behind the protesters when their attempts to mediate the situation failed.

With the waning support of the military and the unrest amplified by the presidential guard's violent treatment of the peaceful march, Ratsiraka made the decision to concede to the protesters' demands on October 31, 1991. He declared that he would support the drafting of a new constitution and the formation of free, fair multiparty elections where citizens would be allowed to vote for a candidate from any party. During this democratization process, a transitional government was set up in which Albert

Zafy was head of the High State Authority, essentially sharing power with Ratsiraka during the process. A new constitution was approved in August 1992, and elections took place that November. As the Forces Vives candidate, Albert Zafy captured 46% of the popular vote with Ratsiraka lagging at 26% (the remainder of the vote was spread among a handful of candidates from other parties). On February 10, 1993, a second vote was held between Ratsiraka and Zafy, with Zafy boasting 67% of the vote. Ratsiraka receded into self-imposed exile.

Research Notes

Sources:

Donovan, Johnny. "BBC News | AFRICA | Ratsiraka: Madagascar's 'big Man'" BBC News. BBC News, 15 Mar. 2002. Web. 12 Oct. 2011. <<http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/africa/1867107.stm>>.

"Human Rights Issues in Madagascar." Wild Madagascar.org. Wild Madagascar, Aug. 1994. Web. 12 Oct. 2011. <http://www.wildmadagascar.org/overview/loc/54-human_rights.html>.

Immigration and Refugee Board of Canada, Madagascar: Information on a general strike launched by the coalition of parties known as the Forces Vives, 1 November 1994, MDG18960.E, available at: <http://www.unhcr.org/refworld/docid/3ae6ab738c.html> [accessed 7 October 2011]

Immigration and Refugee Board of Canada. "UNHCR | Refworld | The Leader in Refugee Decision Support." UNHCR: the UN Refugee Agency. UNHCR, 1 Nov. 1994. Web. 12 Oct. 2011. <<http://www.unhcr.org/cgi-bin/texis/vtx/refworld/rwmain?page=search>>.

"Madagascar." Information Please. Information Please Database. Web. 12 Oct. 2011. <<http://www.infoplease.com/ipa/A0107743.html?pageno=2>>.

"Madagascar Leader Extends State of Emergency." The Los Angeles Times. Los Angeles Times/ Associated Press, 21 Aug. 1991. Web. 12 Oct. 2011. <http://articles.latimes.com/1991-08-21/news/mn-756_1_government-leaders>.

"Madagascar Opposition Calls General Strike to Drive President From Office - Los Angeles Times." Featured Articles From The Los Angeles Times. Los Angeles Times/ Times Wire Services, 12 Aug. 1991. Web. 12 Oct. 2011. <http://articles.latimes.com/1991-08-12/news/mn-458_1_general-strike>.

"MADAGASCAR: Timeline - Madagascar's Turbulent Political History | ReliefWeb." Home | ReliefWeb. Integrated Regional Information Networks, 17 Mar. 2010. Web. 12 Oct. 2011. <<http://reliefweb.int/node/348620>>.

"Madagascar-The Second Republic, 1975-92." Mongabay.com. Mongaby, Aug. 1994. Web. 12 Oct. 2011. <http://www.mongabay.com/history/madagascar/madagascar-the_second_republic,_1975-92.html>.

Nakhoda, Zein. "Madagascar General Strike in Support of Marc Ravalomanana, 2002." Global Nonviolent Action Database. Swarthmore College, 14 May 2011. Web. 12 Oct. 2011. <<http://nvdatabase.swarthmore.edu/content/madagascar-general-strike-support-marc-ravalomanana-2002>>.

Perlez, Jane. "Opposition Vows to Keep Up Strike in Madagascar." New York Times 25 Aug. 1991. The New York Times - Breaking News, World News & Multimedia. New York

Additional Notes:

Ratsiraka returned to Madagascar after his self-imposed exile and managed to regain the presidency by 1997 and remained in power until massive demonstrations ousted him once again in 2002. (See Madagascar general strike in support of Marc Ravalomanana, 2002).

Name of researcher, and date dd/mm/yyyy:

Elena Ruyter, 12/10/2011

A project of Swarthmore College, including Peace and Conflict Studies, the Peace Collection, and the Lang Center for Civic and Social Responsibility.

Copyright Swarthmore College.

Creative Commons License

Global Nonviolent Action Database is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-NonCommercial-NoDerivs 3.0 Unported License .

Original website design and artwork created by Daniel Hunter.

Permissions beyond the scope of this license may be available at <http://nvdatabase.swarthmore.edu> .

Registered users can login to the website.

Source URL (retrieved on 02/08/2016 - 15:21): <http://nvdatabase.swarthmore.edu/content/madagascar-citizens-force-free-elections-1990-1992>

Links:

- [1] <http://nvdatabase.swarthmore.edu/category/movement-clusters/african-democracy-campaigns-early-1990s>
- [2] <http://nvdatabase.swarthmore.edu/category/pcs-tags/mainly-or-initiated-people-color>
- [3] <http://nvdatabase.swarthmore.edu/category/pcs-tags/example-paradox-repression>
- [4] <http://nvdatabase.swarthmore.edu/category/pcs-tags/example-regime-change>
- [5] <http://nvdatabase.swarthmore.edu/category/pcs-tags/included-participation-more-one-social-class>